

Working With Nonprofits To Expand And Improve

We weren't aware of the extent of the services at Neighborhood Ministries, a community organization providing outreach and empowerment programs. One of our clients fortunately introduced us to Neighborhood Ministries. We took a tour.

It's hard to take a tour of their property and see what they're doing and not get incredibly excited and buy in," Jason Morris said.

On a pro bono basis, Withey Morris has been working on a project for Neighborhood Ministries for about a year. The City of Phoenix's Historic Preservation office allowed Neighborhood Ministries to proceed with a project that will provide a much-needed Head Start program.

"It's always nice to have one project at all times that is community based," Jason said.

Before the Neighborhood Ministries project, Jason served on the Fundraising Cabinet for Phoenix Children's Hospital's Center for Cancer & Blood Disorders and helped the Boys & Girls Club of Metro Phoenix open several new clubs and served on their Board of Directors.

Withey Morris focuses its expertise on nonprofits that are trying to expand or improve their services and need help with zoning and jurisdictional work.

"You should always be able to have a passion for what you do. It's hard to be a good zoning attorney and not love this Valley. So if you feel that way, it makes sense and try to help improve services that are offered.
